AT THE WINTER PALACE.

All Was Quiet and Serene Until a Most Auspicious Event Created an Uproar.

It was the hour before dawn. The great city, wrapped in slumber, lay white and silent under its heavy mantle of snow, narrates Judge.

Suddenly lights flashed and twinkled in the windows of the winter palace; sleepy servants hurried to and fro; officers of the royal household were hastily awakened and sent forth upon important missions. The emperor himself arose and summoned the great council of the empire. Aids and orderlies galloped at breakneck pace through the deserted streets, the imperial reserves were tumbled out of their barracks in anticipation of riots, public demonstrations, and civil and military officers, high in the confidence of the crown, drove with all speed to the palace. The foreign secretary was summoned to his desk by royal command, and every department of the government was soon alive with clerks and officials. Correspondents of the associated press hastened to headquarters for news of international import. The city was at last awake. People thronged the streets; bells were rung and bonfires were soon crackling on every prospect and thoroughfare. The cafes were ablaze with light; shouts of joy and cheers for the emperor were heard on every side. The city had gone mad.

"Is there good news from the far east?" ventured a curious foreigner of a gendarme who stood near by.

"A thousand times better, excellency," said the official proudly. "The imperial infant has cut its first tooth."

WHY SOME GROW OLD.

"Record None But the Hours of Sunshine" Is a Motto We Should Live By.

Bitter memories of a sinful life which has gone all wrong make premature furrows in the face, take the brightness from the eyes, and the elasticity from the step, and makes one's life aimless and uninteresting. writes Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine.

We grow old because we do not know enough to keep young, just as we become sick and diseased because we do not know enough to keep well.
Sickness is a result of ignorance and wrong thinking. The time will come when a man will no more harbor thoughts that will make him sick or weak than he would think of putting his hands into fire. No man can be sick if he always has right thoughts and takes ordinary care of his body.
If he will think only youthful thoughts he can maintain his youth far beyond the usual period.

If you would "be young when old," adopt the sun dial's motto, "I record none but hours of sunshine." Never mind the dark or shadowed hours.
Forget the unpleasant, unhappy days.
Remember only the days of rich experiences; let the others drop into oblivion.

It is said that "long lives are great hoppers." If you keep your hope bright in spite of discouragements, and meet all difficulties with a cheerful face, it will be very difficult for age to trace its furrows on your brow.
There is longevity in cheerfulness.

FRESH BITS OF FINERY.

Small Details of Feminine Apparel That Are at Present in Evidence.

The printed chiffons, or gauzes, are in high favor, and these are often oddly combined with heavier materials.

A stunning new ribbon, in all the idealized orange shades, looks like a shimmer of gold when it is crushed up into a girdle.

New leather belts show the influence of tucks and shirtings, for the soft leathers and suedes are puckered in tiny folds in just the appearance of shirring.

Opera bags are getting more like old-fashioned reticules than ever, with their exquisitely flowered silks some of them even carrying out the idea in quaint bead patterns.

The street costume par excellence is of mannish tweed or broadcloth or the dressier velveteens, the skirt laid in wide but shallow plaits that are stitched well down to hold the skirt trimly fitted about the hips.

Many of the new silks have scattered over them little designs in the shape of disks, squares, dots, etc., in velvet or satin, and the brocade velvets often carry out these same ideas.

A clergyman vouches for the truth of a story which would otherwise be incredible. The winter of 1885 was the coldest in the experience of Minnesota farmers and the live stock suffered terribly, says the Chicago Chronicle.
About a mile from the clergyman's house was a piece of timber. He kept his oxen busy, he says, hauling wood to his house. The snow lay three feet deep, and the sledding was good. On January 1 he yoked his oxen, and, in addition to the yoke, used some heavy harness, including thick leather traces. It was one o'clock when he left home, and in an hour or so he was loading the wood on the sled. He adds:

"Meanwhile a blinding blizzard blew up, sweeping over the prairie at the rate of 50 miles an hour, and piling up the snow in drifts from eight to ten feet deep. As the winds increased both myself and my oxen became chilled to the marrow, and I knew that it was certain

LOVE DIES.

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox says there comes a time in the course of married love when "the thrill goes out of the handclasp and the kiss at times, and it is then that husband and wife may be susceptible to other magnetic personalities." The reason for this condition of affairs is often the fault of the husband, but how often is it not due to the wife's nervousness and irritability due to some trouble with the organs peculiarly feminine—the wife under such circumstances feels languid and spiri-tless—she suffers perhaps from headache and sleeplessness.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhoea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

A great deal of sickness may be saved by death to man and beast to stay out any longer.

"Turning the heads of my oxen homeward in the very teeth of the blinding storm I urged them on across the open space between the timber and my house.
But oxen, however, willing, are never rapid and the one mile seemed ten to me as the heavy beasts pushed onward.
Feeling that I should surely freeze to death in a short time, I jumped down from my load, plunged homeward through the snow and reached my barn in half an hour.

"I knew that my oxen could feel their way home, and fully expected them to appear at my barn by nightfall, if, perchance, they were not blinded by the storm or lost by the increasing drifts.
But night came on and no oxen.

"The storm abated and I started out with my hired man to find my missing cattle and my load of wood. We floundered through the snow toward the timber, but the oxen were nowhere to be seen. We hunted all night long and arrived home just in time for breakfast, puzzled and mystified. After breakfast out we started again, helped this time by some of our neighbors, but after a fruitless search we came back, vanquished.

"No neighbor had seen the oxen and their disappearance became the assensation of the neighborhood. They had either been lost for good, frozen to death in the deep snow or else had wandered off across the prairie to some distant farmer's barn. We advertised in the country papers, offering a reward of $200 for the return of the oxen and the wood. One week, two, three, passed by, but still no solution.

"It was January 31. There had been a thaw for several days and much of the snow on the prairie had disappeared, leaving only one foot in depth, except in the deep hollows of my ranch. I was driving a team of heavy farm horses over to the timber to get another load of wood, when, on passing through a small ravine a little to one side of the ordinary road I noticed a movement in the snow.

"Drawing in my reins, I alighted, walked about ten feet from my horses, and, lo! there were my oxen alive, yoked together, standing in four feet of snow, with just enough of their bodies visible above the snow to make a movement visible.

"They had been caught between the stumps of two trees and there they had been for 30 days, unable to move, and saved from freezing to death only by the deep snow that so mercifully had covered them.

"They had eaten everything within reach, including the leather harness, most of the wood of the sled pole, the bark of the tree trunks, the twigs and sticks lying around and the roots of the trees to a depth of three feet. There they stood for 30 days. They were living skeletons. Every bone was visible. Yet they were able to walk home, and after careful feeding for another 30 days they were as strong as ever, and were faithful animals on my farm for ten years afterward."
